Next Week: 21st Sunday of the Year: Page 120: Isaiah 22:19-23; Psalm 137; Romans 11:33-36; Matthew 16:13-20

It can be very hard to get away and take a break from our normal duties in today's world. If you have been on holidays you may well have had an unwanted phone call or text from someone you would rather not have heard from on holiday. I'm a great fan of the mobile phone as you may also be. We all know where the off button is but sometime we just don't feel that we should use it.

Do you think if Jesus had a mobile phone in today's gospel he would have turned it off? He has left the pressures of confrontation in Galilee, and seeks peace in the border region of a pagan territory where he does not expect to be disturbed. However, this is not the case for he encounters an anxious mother concerned about her daughter. She asks Jesus for help and healing for her daughter. What follows is a battle of wits between a tired out preacher and the desperate mother.

Jesus first tries silence in the hope she will go away, "but he answered her not a word", then he used defence "I was sent for the lost sheep of the House of Israel". He then resorts to a put down "it is not fair to take the children's food and throw it to the house-dogs". However, this is one determined woman, she will not be put down or put off. "Ah yes, sir, but even house-dogs can eat the scraps that fall from the master's table". Jesus admits defeat, yes he is tired and exhausted but he sees this woman has faith in God and is desperate for help. "Woman, you have great faith" and at that moment her daughter is healed.

God's mercy has no boundaries, his love and mercy is for everyone. It is not just for those who attend Church regularly or not just for those who pray regularly. Mathew's gospel shows that Jesus came to minister to the whole world, that God becomes man in the person of Jesus in order to bring salvation to the whole world. There are no borders or boundaries in the love Jesus has for each of us. Faith in Jesus calls us to remove all barriers in our minds and to show love and mercy to one and all.

If you are seeking to understand better the love and mercy of God as lived in the Catholic tradition, then please contact me regarding the Faith Formation course that will begin on Wednesday the 27th September. This course is designed to help you explore the Catholic faith and decide if you would like to become a member of the Catholic Church.

Wishing you all a peaceful summertime,

Bridget
