(Missal Page 170 – YEAR A Vol. 2)

Acts:12:1-11; Psalm 33; 2 Timothy 4:6-8 17-18; Matthew 16:13-19

Romans 8:9, 11-13; Matthew 11:25-30

Dear Friends,

The novel “Quo Vadis?” by the great Polish writer Henryk Sienkiewicz was the inspiration for the Hollywood epic movie “QUO VADIS?” Did you watch it? The novel is based on the story: that as Saint Peter was fleeing Rome to escape the persecution of Christians by Nero, he met a stranger on the Via Appia, the Appian Way, the famous road that leads into Rome. Peter said to the stranger: “Quo vadis?” (“Where are you going?”), and the stranger immediately answered: “I am going to Rome to be crucified again.” Peter then realised that the stranger was Christ himself, and so understood that he must return to Rome himself, and face the persecution.

Many of us have our own Via Appia, and our own well-trodden escape route. In the face of difficult responsibilities in the family or at work; when tempted; or perhaps in relationships that failed and for which we blame ourselves; or perhaps a pregnancy outside marriage; an abortion; a horrible deceit; an infidelity in marriage; or in priesthood; or in religious life; a terrible mistake we made against our parents, family or children. Many of us just want to run away, escape; to console ourselves, sometimes with consolations we later regret, that cause us shame and remorse. We might think we were given our chance in life, but we ruined it. We are paying the price. Will there be another chance? - YES!

YES, Christ appears to us, going to the very place from which we are running away, the Cross. For those of us who worry and doubt, today’s feast of the Apostles Peter and Paul comes with a message of hope and a promise of healing. Peter betrayed Christ denying him three times on the night of the passion, the very hour where Christ needed him most of all. Paul persecuted Christ in women and children even, hounding them and sending them to prison. We too have betrayed Christ many times, and in many ways. We too by our selfishness and sin have persecuted Christ in others.

The Good News however revealed in the lives of Peter and Paul is that we can take our place among the sinners. Among all those with broken lives and shameful secrets, we know one thing for certain: our sins and mistakes need not dominate or kill us, because they are not for ever. God gives us what he gave Peter and Paul – a second chance...and a third...and a fourth... And these “second” chances are as valid as the first. Nothing is irrevocable in our lives. Absolutely nothing. Because Christianity does not teach us how to live. No, Christianity teaches us how to live again and again, and again. Therefore, let us pray for each other and entrust each other to the intercession of these two pillars of the Church: Peter and Paul. A great feast and a feast very dear to me, because a year ago on this day I was ordained to the Priesthood. May God fill you all with zeal to share your faith everywhere.

Fr. Fortunato.
